

How the WASP Achieved Success

The woman in the WASP's achieved success in many ways you wouldn't guess. If you aim High, Believe in Yourself, Use Your Brain, Be Ready to Go, Never Quit, or Expect to win, you might just make as big a change as the WASP's. The women in WASP's had to aim high and believe in themselves to get to where they were in society. They used their brains and we're ready to go when they were needed. The women in the WASP's learned to never quit and to also never expect to win.

The woman in the box corporation pushed for the right to fight for their country by believing and aiming high. The women flew over 60 millions miles during missions. They were able to earn a spot in helping their country but they were not yet classified as service people, they were not yet classified as civilians. They were also not granted the benefits or burials of military personnel. One of the reasons they received military status is because they set a goal to gain public support, and be recognized as World War 2 veterans.

The WASP's Were ready to go when needed, and they used their brains to help the US win world war 2. They were Ready to fly the planes to the men overseas and other supplies. According to airandspace.si.edu, "women had to fly operational flights like, towing aerial targets, transporting cargo, smoke laying, and a variety of other missions." Even after the women flying in World War II it still took 30 years for women to fly in the United States navy again. The women had to be creative to find ways to allow them to fly in World War II and to receive military status.

The women who flew during World War II had to learn to never quit even when it got hard. They also had to learn to never stop working hard even when they thought that we would win. According to army.mil, "more than 25,000 women applied for training; only 1,879 candidates were accepted. Among them, 1,074 successfully completed the grueling program at Avenger Field - a better 'wash-out' rate than 50 percent of male pilot cadets." The women received bad opinions from the nation about them working, and yet they still wanted to help their country.

The women in the WASP's fought to serve even when they didn't have to. The WASP's learned to aim High, Believe in themselves, Use their Brains, Be Ready to Go, Never Quit, or Expect to win. The women were motivated to do what they did. They were smart and were ready to go. They worked hard and didn't stop what they were doing. What do you think helped the WASP's achieve the most success?
