Goals

“To succeed in life, you need two things: Ignorance And Confidence.” - Mark Twain. It is an interesting quote. I think if I accomplish those goals I will be successful. I hope to aim high and expect to win in school and sports...and life in general.

I have plenty of goals in life such as what I want to be when I grow up. Most people wish to be veterinarians, or police officers, or a teacher; however, what I want to be when I grow up is an anesthesiologist. An anesthesiologist is a sort of doctor that supervises and also puts patients to sleep before they go in for a medical procedure. I will have to work hard and aim high to reach this goal.

I attempt to aim high in my school work and sports. How I attempt to aim high is when I complete an accomplishment I aim to make a new harder accomplishment to aim for. To aim high in my school work I make an effort to get a higher score each test or worksheet. To aim high in sports I try to increase the points I made in the game previously.

I try to expect to win when I am doing plenty of things such as if I am doing a test or a worksheet, I must think I am going to get an A+ or pass, and never think that I will get an F- or flunk the test or worksheet. Another way I can expect to win is if I'm playing softball and I'm walking to the batter's box, I should think I am going to hit the ball way out to the outfield and not envision that I am going to strike out or hit a ground ball and get out.

If you don't do these things then sometimes things won't work out for you or your confidence will go down. If you try to aim high and expect to win, more things will go how you want them to go. What are some things that help you get your confidence up? What do you want to be when you are older? Find what will motivate you, and stick with it.
