Have you ever doubted yourself? I think most of us have. I am going to focus on using my brain and expecting to win. I picked these because I want to feel like I did great on something and have a plan and goals.

I picked using my brain because if I don't I wouldn't be successful especially at school. When using our brain, you eventually will do more exciting activities like driving a car and going to work at whatever job you have. I think using your brain will make me and you better people.

I chose to expect to win because I want to believe in myself more and try to do so much more and expect to win. If I don't think I'm going to do good and all these other things, and I doubt myself I will start to think negative thoughts. This can change how you perform. I hope I win way more than I did. To do this I need to expect to win.

Using your brain and expecting to win are the best things to learn to do in my opinion. And I think that using these will make us a better person. Now when I start not doing these things and start thinking negative I stop myself. For example, I stopped telling myself I was going to flunk my science test and now I make hundreds in science! So try using your brain and expecting to win. You don't know what might happen!
